

Jott Networks Introduces Jott Voicemail, Uses Voice-to-Text Transcription, Email, SMS and Reminders to Make Voicemail more Productive

SEATTLE, WA – JANUARY 13, 2009 – Jott Networks today announced the addition of Jott Voicemail to its leading mobile productivity service. Jott now transforms typical voicemail from a tedious, menu-laden burden, into a highly productive tool. With Jott, voicemail messages can be easily read or listened to, and are delivered via your choice of email, SMS text, or on the web. Jott offers a one-week free trial of the service and a pricing plan that fits most budgets.

Jott CEO and co-founder John Pollard said, “In this economy, our customers are trying to get more done everyday, and they asked us to apply the power of Jott to voicemail. Our new service gives them an edge by allowing them to be in control and more responsive to the messages that matter most.” He added, “By combining our best-in-class voice-to-text technology with intuitive features like Call Back Reminders, we’re making voicemail work harder for our customers.”

How will Jott Voicemail allow customers to be more productive?

- Read your voicemail
Reading voicemail is faster and more discreet than listening. You can skim and triage messages wherever you are – even noisy places and meetings.
- Get your messages when and where you want them
Receive your voicemail via email, SMS, online, or right on your desktop with Jott Express. You can still access your voicemail by calling, if needed.
- Set Call Back reminders
Set SMS or email reminders on your voicemails, and never forget to return important calls.
- Reply, forward, and share messages with email and SMS
Pass on an important message to your team and be more responsive to messages that matter.
- Search your messages
The ability to search your voicemail as you've always done with email will allow you to keep more complete records and save time trying to remember your last interaction.
